Trump exhorts Republicans to 'get tougher' against impeachment inquiry

Several Republican senators have criticized Trump.

President Donald Trump on Monday exhorted fellow Republicans to get tougher and fight for him, saying the Democratic-led U.S. House of Representatives wants to impeach him "as quick as possible" over his request that Ukraine investigate a political rival.

Trump made his comments during a White House Cabinet meeting as Democrats sought to build public support for their fast-moving impeachment inquiry and the administration pressed its efforts to stonewall a probe that threatens his presidency.

Few Republican lawmakers have shown an inclination to remove Trump from office. But Trump has come under sharp criticism from Republican Senator Mitt Romney.

And other Republicans have expressed misgivings about Trump policies, including criticism by Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell and Senator Lindsey Graham of his withdrawal of U.S. troops in northeastern Syria, exposing U.S.-allied Kurdish fighters to a Turkish cross-border offensive.

Approval of articles of impeachment in the House would prompt a trial in the Republican-led Senate on whether to remove Trump from office. Trump is seeking re-election next year.

> "They want to impeach. And they want to do it as quick as possible. And that's pretty much the story."
> Donald Trump

Asked if it is a foregone conclusion that House Democrats will vote to impeach him, Trump said that "they're not going to beat me in the election, so of course they want to impeach."

"They want to impeach. And they want to do it as quick as possible. And that's pretty much the story," Trump added.

"The Republicans have to get tougher and fight. We have some that are great fighters, but they have to get tougher and fight, because the Democrats are trying to hurt the Republican Party before the election," Trump said.

Trump said the Democrats are "vicious and they stick together."

"They don't have Mitt Romney in their midst. They don't have people like that. They stick together," Trump added.

In an interview aired with "Axios on HBO," Romney denounced Trump's requests to Ukraine and China to investigate Biden, questioned Trump's character, criticized his decision to "abandon" Kurdish allies in the Syria war and deplored his hush money payment to an adult film star. Romney was the 2012 Republican presidential nominee.

Trump, a wealthy real estate developer, also said serving as president has personally cost him $2 billion to $5 billion dollars. Trump also expressed annoyance at having to reverse his decision to stage the Group of Seven summit in June at his Trump National Doral golf resort in the Miami area. His plan to host the international gathering at a business he owns was criticized by Democrats and Republicans who said it gave the impression he was profiting from being president.

Acting White House budget director Russell Vought said both he and Michael Duffey, associate director for national security programs at the Office of Management and Budget, would not provide depositions to the committees leading the impeachment inquiry in the Democratic-led House.

Duffey had been scheduled to testify behind closed doors on Wednesday as Democrats scrutinize Trump's decision to withhold $391 million in security aid to Ukraine before he asked its president to investigate former Vice President Joe Biden.

Other current and former administration officials have defied White House demands that they not cooperate with the inquiry, which threatens Republican Trump's presidency. Another round of crucial testimony is set for this week, including by Bill Taylor, the top U.S. diplomat in Ukraine, on Tuesday.

House Democrats released a fact sheet and video to try to make their case for impeachment, drawing on information already made public about the Ukraine scandal. The impeachment inquiry focuses on Trump pressuring a vulnerable foreign ally to interfere to his benefit in the 2020 U.S. presidential election by providing political dirt on Biden, a leading contender for the Democratic nomination to face Trump.

At issue is a June phone call in which Trump asked Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky to investigate Biden and his son Hunter Biden, who had been a director of a Ukrainian energy company, as well as a discredited theory that Ukraine, and not Russia, interfered in the 2016 U.S. election. U.S. intelligence agencies and a special counsel have concluded that Russia used a campaign of hacking and propaganda to boost Trump's candidacy. REUTERS

Drugstore drones: UPS will fly CVS scripts to customers

2 United Parcel Service Inc's new Flight Forward drone unit will soon start home prescription delivery from CVS Health Corp. The service, which will debut in one or two U.S. cities in the coming weeks, shows how the world's biggest parcel delivery company is expanding the reach of its upstart drone delivery service beyond hospital campuses. UPS Chief Strategy and Transformation Officer Scott Price said the Atlanta-based company, which owns 251 aircraft and charters nearly 300 more, said "Flight Forward will work with new customers in other industries to design additional solutions for a wide array of last-mile and urgent delivery challenges." UPS this month won the U.S. government's first approval to operate a drone airline, taking a lead over rivals like Amazon.com Inc and Alphabet Inc's Wing. REUTERS

Russian group hijacked Iranian spying operation

3 Russian hackers piggy-backed on an Iranian cyber-espionage operation to attack government and industry organizations in dozens of countries while masquerading as attackers from the Islamic Republic, British and U.S. officials said on Monday. The Russian group, known as "Turla" and accused by Estonian and Czech authorities of operating on behalf of Russia's FSB security service, has used Iranian tools and computer infrastructure to successfully hack in to organizations in at least 20 different countries over the last 18 months, British security officials said. The hacking campaign, the extent of which has not been previously revealed, was most active in the Middle East but also in Britain, they said. A senior British GCHQ official said the operation shows state-backed hackers are developing new attacks and methods to better cover their tracks. REUTERS

Over 100 firefighters battle West Philly auto body blaze

A massive fire engulfed the ABM Automotive shop in Cobbs Creek Monday morning.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

A three-alarm fire ripped through a West Philadelphia auto body shop on Monday morning, shooting flames into the sky and creating thick smoke that could be seen for miles.

More than 100 Philadelphia firefighters responded to the fire at ABM Automotive, which is located at 59th and Irving streets in Cobbs Creek. No deaths or injuries were reported, but the fire caused extensive damage; walls of the building collapsed and prompted the evacuation of a nearby high school. Fire Commissioner Adam Thiel described the situation to local media as a "very dangerous operation."

The fire broke out around 10 a.m. Monday, and took about two and a half hours to get under control, fire officials said.

Early Monday, the fire department tweeted an image showing the smoke and said, "We're responding to a 3-alarm fire near 60th and Spruce in West Philadelphia. Due to the amount of apparatus in the area and for the safety of the public and first-responders, please avoid area."

Around 10:30 a.m., a wall of the burning building reportedly collapsed onto cars in the area, and another wall fell onto a residential structure. Firefighters went for the flames on the outside after briefly entering the building. Water was doused all over the building and the surrounding areas to get the fire under control.

The fire department shared on Twitter that 125 firefighters responded to the scene and used over 50 different apparatuses to battle the blaze.

Fire officials said the fire was finally subdued at 12:43 p.m.

NBC reports that the fire caused bricks to fall onto the sidewalk, causing concern for students attending nearby Sayre High School. The school's 400 students were sent to Andrew Hamilton School, which is located a few blocks away at 56th and Spruce streets. Additionally, Tabernacle Lutheran Church day care was evacuated and W.C. Bryant Promise Academy, which is located five blocks away, had an early dismissal due to some smoke from the fire blowing in the building.

The cause of the fire was not immediately announced. Fire officials said the building had been empty when the fire broke out.

SEPTA wraps up work on 15th Street Station

Nearly all Market-Frankford Line stations are now ADA accessible.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

City officials gathered with SEPTA Monday to share news of the completed reconstruction of 15th Street Station on the Market-Frankford Line.

The 15th Street Station, which is the most heavily used station in the transit system, is now fully modernized and is the 26th station on the Market-Frankford Line to become ADA accessible. The project is part of the overall reconstruction of Philadelphia City Hall and the 15th Street Station complex.

"SEPTA is vital to our city's growth and prosperity," said Philadelphia Mayor Jim Kenney. "Its robust transportation system connects Philadelphians from every corner of our city to jobs, medical care, and services, as well as our entertainment district and business corridors."

Thousands of riders use 15th Street Station every day for travel on the Market-Frankford Line, for free transfers to the Broad Street Line and five trolley routes, and for connection to all 13 regional rail lines and numerous bus routes. SEPTA General Manager Jeffrey D. Knueppel said in a press release that, "The reconstruction of 15th Street Station is another example of the important infrastructure enhancements SEPTA is making for our customers, as well as the City and region."

Knueppel added that "With funding from Act 89, we are making investments that not only improve mobility and enhance access but also build communities and support regional economic growth. This project is revitalizing a critical station complex, and we look forward to delivering more improvements here in the near future."

Specific improvements to the 15th Street Station include:

- New elevators that provide accessibility from street level to station platforms
- Reconstructed fare lines and platforms to improve passenger flow
- New lighting, finishes and other amenities to enhance the customer experience
- Art-in-Transit installation by renowned Philadelphia artist Ray King

This Philly lawyer wants to make life a little easier for you

WIGGINS LAW, LLC

ASK JAMIE:

Finding a lawyer you can trust isn't always an easy task. Jamie T. Wiggins, Esq. of Wiggins Law has your back. Metro sat down with her to talk about her passion for law—and the ways she's using it to do good in Philadelphia and beyond.

What drew you to this profession?

When I was young, my dad got injured really badly at work. He was a corrections officer in a little coal-mining town up in northeast Pennsylvania. He was saving the life of another officer and ended up damaging both his knees and his spine. I remember my parents going through the workers' comp process and the social security disability process, and it was just awful. They had lawyers who were happy to take their money without returning their calls or truly advocating for them. They had no support going through the whole thing and spent many sleepless nights worrying about how they were going to put food on the table.

When I was about 12, we went to a social security disability hearing for my dad and the lawyer had never even looked at his file. I remember right then wanting to change that process; to be there for hard-working people like my parents who were doing everything right, but just needed a little help. That's exactly what I've been doing for the last decade.

What does Wiggins Law specialize in?

What I offer is a full-service boutique firm. One advantage we have is that we're small, so we're really able to deliver personalized service. Of course, my focus is on my roots in injury law handling car accidents, slip and falls, medical malpractice… We also handle stuff that's really easily done by a lawyer, but not easy for the average person. For example, let's say you're researching online to create a will. I can put one together for you that's absolutely what you need and includes all your wishes. It's a personal experience that won't break the bank.

Wills, powers of attorneys, small legal estate matters you need help with; these are the kinds of things we handle every day. I like to be my clients' go-to legal person. No matter what, if I can answer your question, I'm going to sit on the phone and give you the time and attention you deserve. If it's out of my wheelhouse, I have what I call my "book of referral partners." These are all the friends I've made and have come to trust over the 10 years I've been doing this, and I know people in all areas of law. If I can't help you, chances are I know someone who can.

How else do you deliver outstanding service?

For starters, we don't use an answering service! No matter what time you call, you're getting a real Wiggins Law employee—somebody who has direct communication with me on the daily. A lot of firms will advertise that they're offering 24/7 answering services, but you're really just speaking to someone who's forwarding calls after hours. We're also more than happy to meet you anywhere or handle things electronically.

We just want to help make your life a little easier, whatever that looks like. That's our mantra. Have a legal issue and need some guidance? Call Wiggins Law today to connect with an empathetic, experienced attorney who'll be in your corner every step of the way.

'Pierre Delecto' Mitt Romney admits Twitter alter ego

Republican Senator Mitt Romney has admitted to using a secret Twitter account under the pseudonym "Pierre Delecto" to follow politicians, journalists and fan accounts for himself, Slate Magazine reported.

Romney mentioned his use of the secret account in a profile published in the Atlantic on Sunday, referring to himself as a "lurker" for surreptitiously following the political conversation on social media.

After a Slate reporter identified Romney's secret account under the name "Pierre Delecto," Romney, who represents Utah, confirmed to the Atlantic that the account was his.

"C'est moi," Romney said in confirmation over the phone, the Atlantic reported.

Representatives for Romney were not immediately available for comment.

The account, which was opened a month after Romney announced his presidential bid in June 2011, had 702 followers and was following 1,172 as of Monday morning. It is now private.

It follows politicians, Romney family members, political advisers, reporters who covered his campaigns, Romney fan accounts, as well as NFL star Tom Brady and late night comedian Jimmy Fallon, Slate reported.

The account had tweeted only 10 times and all in reply to other tweets, Slate reported. One tweet condemned U.S. President Trump's decision to withdraw American forces from northeastern Syria, a move that Romney has criticized publicly.

"John, agree on Trump's awful decision, but what could the Senate do to stop it?" Pierre Delecto tweeted in reply to Twitter user @jwgop on Oct. 9.

Romney is one of few Republicans who has publicly disavowed Trump as a series of controversies have unfolded since he entered the White House in January 2017.

Romney has stood behind the Democratic-led impeachment inquiry of Trump in Congress, saying he's open to removing his fellow Republican from office depending on the results of the investigation. Trump has used Twitter, one of his favorite ways of communicating, to hit back at Romney.

Romney does not follow the president on Twitter because, he told the Atlantic, he believes the president tweets too much. REUTERS

Homes destroyed, thousands without power after tornado rips through Dallas

Dallas authorities were assessing how badly a tornado that plowed through the northern part of the city late on Sunday damaged buildings, as it also flipped cars and knocked out power to more than 175,000 homes and businesses.

Three people have been hospitalized with non-life threatening injuries attributed to the storm, the city of Dallas said in a statement.

"There are still residents impacted by downed trees, power outages, and storm-related damages," the city said, adding that multiple traffic signals were also knocked out by the storm.

Some 55,000 homes and businesses in Dallas County were still without power on Monday morning, emergency management officials said.

REUTERS

The storm left a miles-long swath of destruction through Dallas, hitting near the Love Field airport in the city's north, the National Weather Service's Weather Prediction Center in College Park, Maryland, said on Monday.

Video footage on Twitter showed collapsed roofs, overturned cars and homes reduced to piles of debris in the wake of the twister in Richardson, Texas, a suburb northeast ofDallas.

Around 20 people impacted by the tornado spent the night at a leisure complex near the airport that was turned into a shelter, said Maya Johnson, an assistant at the Bachman Recreation Center.

Images showed the roof and walls of a Home Depot <HD.N> store had caved in, exposing a mangled web of ceiling beams.

"It was exactly one tornado that hit at 9:02 p.m.," said National Weather Service meteorologist David Roth.

"We also saw golf ball- and baseball-sized hail in some areas and a narrow swath of north Dallas that got between one to three inches of rain," Roth said, or the equivalent of 2.5 cm to 7.6 cm. REUTERS

WikiLeaks founder Assange appears confused at extradition hearing

WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange appeared confused at a London court hearing on Monday, struggling to recall his name and age in his first public appearance in months as he sought to fight extradition to the United States.

Assange, 48, who spent seven years holed up in Ecuador's embassy before he was dragged out in April, faces 18 counts in the United States including conspiring to hack government computers and violating an espionage law. He could spend decades in prison if convicted.

On Monday he appeared clean-shaven, without the long beard he had worn at his last public appearance in May, when he was sentenced to 50 weeks in jail for skipping bail.

He appeared in good health, with his white hair combed back and wearing a navy suit over a light blue sweater and white shirt.

But Assange mumbled and stuttered for several seconds as he gave his name and date of birth at the start of a preliminary hearing in the case.

When the judge asked him at the end of the hearing if he knew what was happening, he replied "not exactly", complained about the conditions in jail, and said he was unable to "think properly".

"I don't understand how this is equitable," Assange said. "I can't research anything, I can't access any of my writing. It's very difficult where I am."

> "I don't understand how this is equitable. I can't research anything, I can't access any of my writing. It's very difficult where I am."
> Julian Assange

Assange is being held in a British jail pending the U.S. extradition, having served his sentence for skipping bail.

He fled to Ecuador's embassy in 2012 to avoid being sent to Sweden to face sex crimes accusations. He says the U.S. charges against him are a political attempt to silence journalists and publishers, and the Swedish allegations were part of a plot to catch him. Sweden is reviewing the sex crimes cases.

The Australian-born Assange made global headlines in early 2010 when WikiLeaks published a classified U.S. military video showing a 2007 attack by Apache helicopters in Baghdad that killed a dozen people, including two Reuters news staff.

WikiLeaks later angered the United States by publishing caches of leaked military documents and diplomatic cables.

In court on Monday, former London mayor Ken Livingstone was among Assange's supporters in the public gallery, while protesters gathered outside court.

Assange's lawyer Mark Summers argued that Assange's extradition hearing, scheduled for February 2020, should be delayed by three months due to the complexity of the case.

The judge denied the request and said Assange's extradition hearing would go ahead as planned at Belmarsh magistrates' court in east London in February.

Admirers have hailed Assange as a free speech hero. REUTERS

The clock is ticking on Brexit.

Prime Minister Boris Johnson faces a potentially perilous ratification of his Brexit divorce deal in the British parliament after the speaker refused to allow a vote on it on Monday.

With just 10 days left until the United Kingdom is due to leave the European Union on Oct. 31, the divorce is again in disarray as Britain's politicians argue over whether to leave with a deal, exit without a deal or hold another referendum.

The government is trying to force through the legislation needed for Britain to leave the bloc in the shortest time possible, drawing cries from opposition lawmakers that Johnson was trying to bully and rush lawmakers into passing the bill.

Earlier, House of Commons speaker John Bercow said a vote should not be allowed on Monday as the same issue had been discussed on Saturday when opponents turned Johnson's big Brexit day into a humiliation.

"In summary, today's motion is in substance the same as Saturday's motion and the House (of Commons) has decided the matter. Today's circumstances are in substance the same as Saturday's circumstances," Bercow told parliament.

"My ruling is therefore that the motion will not be debated today as it would be repetitive and disorderly to do so," Bercow said, provoking the ire of Brexit supporting lawmakers who said they had been refused a chance to vote on Johnson's deal.

Bercow said the government could still secure ratification for the Brexit deal by Oct. 31 if it had the numbers in parliament. Johnson was disappointed by the decision, a spokesman said.

But the speaker's decision means that the government will have to try to push on with the legislation needed for ratification, a process opponents are plotting to wreck with amendments that would destroy Johnson's deal.

"Trying to ram through legislation of this complexity, significance and long lasting consequences in just 3 days is an abomination of scrutiny and democracy."

Nicola Sturgeon

Jacob Rees-Mogg, the leader of the House of Commons, said the government wanted the lower house of parliament to finish voting on the bill on Thursday, before it heads to the upper house, which also has to approve it before the Brexit deadline.

"Trying to ram through legislation of this complexity, significance and long lasting consequences in just 3 days is an abomination of scrutiny and democracy," said Nicola Sturgeon, the leader of the Scottish National Party. REUTERS

Drug companies reach $260 million opioid settlement with Ohio counties, averting landmark trial

A sign is seen on the outside of the courtroom on the first day of a trial of Johnson & Johnson over claims they engaged in deceptive marketing that contributed to the national opioid epidemic in Norman, Oklahoma. REUTERS

Four large drug companies reached a last-minute $260 million legal settlement on Monday over their role in the U.S. opioid addiction epidemic, striking a deal with two Ohio counties to avert the first federal trial over the crisis.

However, drug distributors AmerisourceBergen Corp, Cardinal Health Inc and McKesson Corp and drugmaker Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd fell short of a wider deal worth tens of billions of dollars to end all opioid litigation against them.

The distributors, which handle around 90% of U.S. prescription drugs, will pay a combined $215 million immediately. Israel-based drugmaker Teva is paying $20 million in cash and will contribute $25 million worth of Suboxone, an opioid addiction treatment, according to Hunter Shkolnik, an attorney for the counties.

Teva, the world's largest generic drugmaker, will makes its contribution over 18 months, according to Shkolnik.

The deal settles claims brought by Ohio's Cuyahoga and Summit counties, which had accused the companies of fueling a nationwide opioid crisis. Some 400,000 U.S. overdose deaths between 1997 and 2017 were linked to opioids, according to government data.

"While the companies strongly dispute the allegations made by the two counties, they believe settling the bellwether trial is an important stepping stone to achieving a global resolution and delivering meaningful relief," the distributors said a joint statement. Teva declined to comment.

The so-called bellwether or test trial was meant to help shape a broader settlement of some 2,600 lawsuits pending over the toll opioids have taken on local communities and the nation.

Late on Friday, talks collapsed that were aimed at reaching a $48 billion global settlement of all opioid litigation against the same defendants.

> "We are not surprised to see distributor shares giving back some of last week's gains as uncertainty persists in this extremely complex litigation."
> Eric Coldwell

Shares in the companies had risen last week in anticipation of a broader deal. On Monday, shares of the big three drug distributors were down from more than 2% to 4%, having trimmed earlier losses.

The settlement, if extrapolated to nationwide deal resolving all litigation for the four defendants, suggests a settlement value of around $48 billion.

DELIVERY DISASTER

Last night, I ordered some Chinese food. By the time the delivery guy handed me my food I knew something was wrong. The whole bottom of the plastic bag that was holding the food containers was FULL of greasy sauce. I had to rinse off the containers and wipe them down in order to set them anywhere without leaving a mess. Gross.

A New Sex Pill Takes the Spotlight as the Viagra Patent is About to Expire

A patented pill costing less than $1 a dose stands to help millions of men with failing sex lives; no prescription will be required

By Ray Wilson
Associated Health Press

AHP – A new sex pill is set to take the spotlight with the Viagra patent about to expire. But unlike the former, it won't require a prescription and is priced just under a $1 a dose.

The new pill called Vesele is part of a new class of performance enhancers for men, which work instantaneously on the body and mind triggering arousal and firmer, harder erections.

Formulated with a special compound known as an "accelerator", Vesele can transport its active ingredients faster and more efficiently into the blood stream, where it begins to work its magic.

The patented ingredient blend initiates a process known as vasodilation, which causes arteries and vessels throughout the body to expand. This allows blood to flow directly to penis and genitals, resulting in harder erections which last longer. Cialis and Viagra are based around a simlilar concept.

But what makes Vesele so remarkable, and what these other sex pills can't do, is that also directs a small portion of this blood flow to the brain, which creates feelings of intense arousal. In laymen's terms, users become incredibly excited and turned on.

This is why the makers of Vesele say their pill has worked so effectively in clinical trials. It stimulates the two most important organs for great sex, the penis and the brain.

The Brain Erection Connection

Until now, medical researchers did not fully understand the brain-erection connection. It has now been made clear with Vesele. When both are supplied with a constant blood flow, men are harder and firmer for longer...and have unbelievable sex drives.

"Most of the research and treatment methods for men's sexual failures have focused on physiological factors and have neglected the emotional ones. For the leading sex drugs to work, like Cialis and Viagra, you need visual stimulation" explains Dr. Henry Esber, the creator of Vesele.

"And although they work for some men, the majority experience absolutely no fulfillment during sex.

According to research published by the National Institute of Health, 50% of men taking these drugs stop responding or can't tolerate their side effects...and on top of that they spend $50 per pill and it doesn't even work half the time.

This is what makes Vesele so different and effective. It floods the blood stream with key ingredients which cause arteries all over the body to expand. The patented accelerator speeds up this process even more.

The result is a rush of blood flow to the penis and brain, helping to create an impressive erection and a surging desire for sex. Often, this is all men need to get going. And when taken regularly, many men say they are energized and aroused all day."

Great Sex At Any Age

With the conclusion of their latest human clinical use survey trial, Dr. Esber and his team are now offering Vesele in the US. And regardless of the market, its sales are exploding.

Men across the country are eager to get their hands on the new pill and according to the research, they should be.

In the trial above, as compared to baseline, men taking Vesele saw a staggering 85% improvement in erection hardness over a four-month period. Their erections also lasted twice as long.

These same men also experienced an astounding 82% increase in the desire for sex (libido/sex drive) and an even greater improvement in overall satisfaction and ability to satisfy their partners.

Many men taking Vesele described feeling horny and aroused through the day. The anticipation before sex was amazing. They were also easily turned on. Their moods were more upbeat and positive, too.

Faster Absorption into the Blood Stream

Vesele is made up of three specialized ingredients: two clinical strength vasodilators and a patented absorption enhancer often called an accelerator. According to an enormous amount of clinical data, each is very safe.

Research shows that with age, many men lose their desire and interest in sex. They also struggle to produce an erection firm enough for penetration.

And although there are many theories as to why this happens (including a loss in testosterone) one thing is certain, inadequate blood flow is virtually always to blame. That's why sex drug manufacturers focus on blood flow, it makes your erection hard.

But what's more surprising, and what these manufacturers have failed to consider, is that lack of blood flow can also kill your sex drive. That's because blood supplies energy for the brain. This energy is required for creating brainwaves that cause excitability and arousal.

Studies show the Vesele stimulates the entire cardiovascular system, including the arteries that lead to both the brain and penis. The extreme concentration of the ingredients combined with the accelerator ensures that this process starts quickly.

Expiring Patent Opens the Door to a New Sex Pill: Vesele is a new pill that cost just $1 a dose does not require a prescription. It works on both body and mind to increase arousal and erection hardness.

The sexual benefits of Vesele are also multiplied as its ingredients build up in the system over time. This is why many men take it every single day.

Recent Studies Show Positive Effects on Women

In the same study referenced throughout, Vesele was also shown to have an amazing (and somewhat surprising) effect on women too. That's because the same arteries and vessels that carry blood and oxygen to the brain and genitals are the same in men and women.

"In our most recent study, women taking Vesele saw a stunning 52% improvement in arousal and sex drive. Perhaps more impressive, they also experienced a 57% improvement in lubrication.

You can imagine why some couples are taking Vesele together. Everything feels better. Everything works better. Everyone performs better. It's truly amazing."

A New Frontier of Non-Prescription Sex Pills

With daily use, Vesele is helping men (and women) restore failing sex lives and overcome sexual lets downs without side effect or expense.

Through a patented absorption enhancer, the Vesele formula hits the bloodstream quickly, resulting in phenomenal improvements in erection firmness and hardness. By boosting blood flow to the brain, users also experience sexual urges and arousal they often haven't felt in years.

Starcrawler are here to 'Devour You'

The exciting young band reach for the ceiling on their new album.

PAT KING

PROVIDED

The Los Angeles band Starcrawler is starving. If you've ever seen the band live, then you know that these young punks are hungry and determined to take over. Lead by the striking and dynamic front person, Arrow de Wilde — who is the daughter of famed rock photographer Autumn de Wilde and musician Aaron Sperske — with guitarist and vocalist Henri Cash, drummer Austin Smith, and bassist Timothy Franco, the band is making a big impression on the indie rock scene all while being under the legal drinking age. With their sophomore effort, "Devour You," the band has created an album that reaches for the ceiling while standing on its tippy-toes while trying to gain its balance on a step ladder. From start to end, it is all at once dangerous, thrilling and satisfying. You know, like how a great rock and roll album should be.

"We didn't have that much time because we've been on tour for the past couple of years on our first record," says Cash about the recording of the record. "So basically our first break we had to write a whole record. And so we pretty much just stuck together and see where we were at and after doing a bunch of demos and it's kind of just what came out, all that constantly being gone and just wanting to perfect our live show too."

But to strike that balance is a tricky thing for most artists. As a band you want your albums to live on their own as a document separate from your live show. But if you go with the intention of decimating your audience night after night, making an album that lives up to the live show can be a big mountain to climb for a band like Starcrawler. The band rips with efficiency onstage while de Wilde contorts and wails as if her life depends on it. That kind of ferocity is something you can't necessarily bottle.

"I wouldn't want a record to sound completely raw or live, you know?" says de Wilde, whose thrilling and sometimes menacing stage presence makes Starcrawler such a captivating force to behold up close and personal. "You want [a] record to sound like a record. But also I wouldn't want it to sound too polished to where it's not us anymore."

The band was able to navigate these waters with a sort of aggressive grace on "Devour You." In some cases, this is the most aggressive and heavy material that the young band has committed to tape yet. Songs like "Toy Teenager" and "Tank Top" perfectly capture the restless punk energy of bands like X and the Fastbacks. But the album also shows a considerable growth towards expanding the band's sound, with touches of country-inspired songcraft on songs like "No More Pennies," which finds them veering towards the dangerous and sentimental swagger of the Stones in their prime '70s cowboy-soul worship.

"It was interesting because when it came time to record, those were just like the demos that I made for the country-ish demos because we'd just been listening to a lot of country-ish bands. And I was actually worried that no one was going to like them because you know, it's a bit different," explains Cash with a laugh.

As the band has been constantly on the road, their unique sound and undeniable live show have attracted some attention from pretty high-profile fans like Elton John, Beck, Foo Fighters and Shirley Manson of Garbage. For such a young band, having such an upper-echelon group of fans from the rock community is something that de Wilde doesn't think she'll ever get used to.

"I can't imagine ever just getting used to like, Mick Jagger, liking the album. No matter who it is, it's never going to be on a first-name basis [laughs]."

Make sure to catch Starcrawler this Saturday, October 26 at Boot & Saddle. 1131 South Broad Street.

Philly Fights Cancer: Round 5 is this Saturday

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

This weekend holds one of the city's largest and most impactful charity events, Philly Fights Cancer: Round 5. The annual occurrence is always star-studded and quite colorful all while benefitting a great cause, and 2019 is no different. Hugh Jackman, John Mulaney and Andy Grammar are all slotted to perform at the event this Saturday, and this year Philly Fights Cancer will also be honoring the Breast Cancer Clinical Investigative Team at the Abramson Cancer Center. Stephanie Wolfson, co-chair of the Philly Fights Cancer Young Friends gave Metro to scoop on what to expect at the extravaganza and dive into how Philadelphians can get more involved.

For those who have never been to Philly Fights Cancer, what does the event incorporate?
Philly Fights Cancer is not your typical fundraiser or gala. It is a unique night that brings together philanthropists and supporters of the Abramson Cancer Center of all generations. The night truly is a celebration. It's a way to honor those who are fighting and a way to honor those who have lost their fight in the hopes of essentially putting ourselves out of business because cancer has been cured. This year's event will feature performances by Hugh Jackman, John Mulaney, and Andy Grammer.

Hugh Jackman will be performing this Saturday at Philly Fights Cancer: Round 5 GETTY

Is there anything specifically different about this year's event compared to years passed?
This is the 5th year of Philly Fights Cancer, and our honoree is the Breast Cancer Clinical Investigative team, where in years past, we have honored a specific doctor or researcher. Honoring a team is unique because it allows us to honor the many clinicians that play a role in a patient's cancer journey from diagnosis, through treatment and beyond.

For those who don't know, what does the event benefit?
Philly Fights Cancer specifically benefits clinical trials and translational research at the Abramson Cancer Center at the University of Pennsylvania. The Abramson Cancer Center is known for providing patients with groundbreaking innovative care. The doctors and researchers need funding in order to continue to innovate, push boundaries and quite literally change the world.

Are there ways for Philadelphians to get more involved with the event or Young Friends?
We are always looking for new and familiar faces to get more involved with Philly Fights Cancer. As the co-chair of the Young Friends of Philly Fights Cancer, we have many ways to become involved. We help steer committee members to find a level of involvement that is both meaningful and appropriate for their schedule and interests, whether that is helping to plan events and fundraise on a regular basis or to attend our quarterly events and help introduce us to their network.

If you go:

Oct. 26, 6 pm-1 am, Navy Yard, 4701 Intrepid Ave., phillyfightscancer.org

Is there anything else specific you would want Philadelphians to know about either Philly Fights Cancer: Round 5 or Philly Fights Cancer Young Friends?
I want Philadelphians to know that Philly Fights Cancer is bigger and better than what you could ever imagine. We are so fortunate to have a world-renowned cancer center in our back yard and just like the doctors and researchers at the ACC, we are continuing to raise the bar. In the past 5 years, we have raised $26M and I think that speaks for itself.

Be prepared, stay calm and have a plan

The world premiere of "The Worst Case Scenario: Survival Experience" opened last weekend at the Franklin Institute.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

The best-selling cheeky survival-tip book, "The Worst Case Scenario" is taking on a life of its own through the Franklin Institute's latest exhibit. The book, which also celebrated it's 20th anniversary with updated info this spring, touched on real-life dangerous situations and provided expert tips on how to survive while still making the material fun, playful and perfect for all ages. Authors David Borgenicht and Josh Piven teamed up with the FI to bring the content of the book to life through immersive activities and real-life scenario simulations with plenty of fun and laughter in between.

"The Worst Case Scenario: Survival Experience" world premiere opened last weekend, and already the unique exhibit is a hit. When the authors of the book decided to elevate their wildly popular franchise even more with an interactive exhibit, they thought of no better place to start than Philadelphia. Living in the City of Brotherly Love themselves it was the perfect fit, and with Philly also being home to one of the premier science museums in the country, you could also say it was their best-case scenario.

"We brought it to Franklin to get some advice about whether or not it was possible to do and to build something like this. They said that it was and that they wanted to do it with us, it was really a partnership," says Piven. "Other museums look to the Franklin Institute to see how exhibits do to judge whether or not they will bring them to their cities. So it's really great to have that here."

The gymnasium-style exhibit features thirteen different survival scenario challenges that will test guests of all ages in a fun and unique way. Philadelphians can learn the safest way to jump from a moving train, pick a lock, escape from quicksand, survive an avalanche, and more through the helpful tips and side-by-side training the exhibit provides.

the book and unleash your inner survival expert and your inner action hero," says Borgenicht. "The biggest takeaway is to manage your fear---it's true that the biggest thing to fear is fear itself. If you manage to remain calm you are going to be at least 50% more likely to get through anything. It's when you panic that you make mistakes and problems arise. Our hope is that when people come to the exhibit, they really get the overall message that no matter what it is the world throws at you, there's going to be a way to survive it."

According to the release, "The Worst Case Scenario: Survival Experience" also features tools that can be used for extreme survival including counterintuitive uses for everyday items on display, plus graphics that share how to identify anxiety and fear within the body and uncover how stress, physical exhaustion, and disorientation can make an activity, like surviving, more challenging.

The world premiere exhibit also highlights incredibly brave individuals and everyday heroes in the Hall of Fame gallery. Survivors of wildly dangerous experiences relay what they did to survive, and experts who encounter risky scenarios daily (emergency first responders, wildlife rescue workers, psychologists, and physical trainers) also relay important information to keep in mind.

Guests can also listen in on additional advice and instructions from the original audiobook voiced by film legend Burt Reynolds, and a live actor aka the "Worst Case Pro" will be walking around the exhibit to get guests in the survival mood and remind them of the three most important tools: be prepared, don't panic and have a plan.

"This has been a 20 year-long endeavor, it can be a scary world out there these days but with the right attitude and the right experts you can make it through anything," says Borgenicht. "I think that's what people have responded to in the book, and that's what people will respond to through the experience here at the Franklin Institute. Hopefully, we can all stay calm and help each other out of the ball pits of life."

"The Worst Case Scenario: Survival Exhibit" will be at the Franklin Insitute (222 N 20th St.) until April 2020. For more information visit fi.edu

Absolutely considering he won't always be the focal point for opposing defenses for the first time in his career.

Does he have something to prove?

Damn straight. He possesses the talent to be the best player in the game as we saw two years ago when he was putting up 30 and 15 almost every night down the stretch.

Will he be on a team capable of winning over 60 games in the regular season?

Oh yes. This will be the first time in years that LeBron James will be giving it his all during the regular season as he has had six months of rest after the Lakers missed the playoffs.

GETTY IMAGES

LeBron also owes it to his Klutch Sports buddy to get him the MVP, and not take one more for himself, considering how ridiculous things got last year with defacto Lakers GM Rich Paul sabotaging the Pelicans' season in an attempt to get Davis to LA a few months early. At this stage of his career, LeBron is smart enough to know that he needs Davis a lot more than Davis needs him.

Joel Embiid (+1600)

Much like Kawhi Leonard, Embiid isn't a great pick for MVP due to the "load management" his team is likely to implement. MVP should almost be called the "Iron Man Award," as voters always reward players that played close to the full season. Giannis played in 72 games last season, James Harden played in 72 in 2017-18, and Russell Westbrook played in 81 games in his MVP year. Can't imagine Embiid plays in more than 65 games this season, as there's more than a few reasons Elton Brand brought in Al Horford.

Giannis (+270)

Voter fatigue is real (Giannis won it this past season), and 80 percent of the NBA national media is based in LA.

Steph Curry (+500)

Curry may put up some ridiculous numbers but there's a chance the Warriors don't even make the playoffs in the loaded West. You can't give the MVP to a player on a team with less than 45 wins.

College FB betting: Auburn at LSU

Best bets

The second-ranked LSU Tigers face off against the ninth-ranked Auburn Tigers in Baton Rouge, LA this Saturday. There does not appear to be an upset brewing.

LSU has exceeded expectations this year by going 7-0 with wins over Texas, Florida and, most recently, Mississippi State. The latter two were by multiple scores. Senior quarterback Joe Burrow has led the nation's second-best passing attack by completing over 79 percent of his passes for 11.4 yards per attempt with a 29-3 TD-INT ratio. Wide-out Justin Jefferson is seventh in the country in receiving yards (759) and just one off the lead in TDs at nine. Auburn's defense is ill-equipped to handle this kind of aerial assault as they're just 75th in passing yards allowed per game this season.

Auburn's strength on offense is their JaTarvious Whitlow-led running game, which is 20th in yards per contest. However, LSU's defense is 11th in rushing yards allowed per game. Quarterback Bo Nix (56.2 percent completion rate, 7.7 yards per attempt) doesn't seem capable of making the throws to keep his team from falling behind.

DEBACLE IN DALLAS NAILS SHUT THE EAGLES SUPER BOWL ERA

THE SPORTS PROFESSOR

GLEN MACNOW
@RealGlenMacnow

The Eagles were demolished by the Cowboys on Sunday night. GETTY IMAGES

Two things crashed down in Dallas Sunday night.

The first was the illusion that this Eagles team is a contender. The second was any grace period left from Super Bowl LII.

Let's face it, many of us have soft-pedaled this franchise's shortcomings for a while, still blinded by the brilliant memory of confetti raining onto Broad Street 18 months ago. The Eagles overcame such odds to win that first-ever Super Bowl, then put on a late-season push to the playoffs last year and... well, why couldn't they do it again?

The reasons became apparent in Sunday's 37-10 massacre by the Cowboys. And the Era of Good Feelings between fans and franchise has likely come to an end.

The causes of this nationally televised embarrassment are too many to cover in-depth here. So I'll quickly list Nelson Agholor's alligator arms, the secondary's lazy tackling, Fletcher Cox's "Invisible Man" act, the overall uselessness of the wide receiver corps and the confused ineptitude of an offensive line that was once regarded as the NFL's best.

Carson Wentz had a poor night — fumbling, throwing a pick and sailing too many passes. Wentz has been beleaguered by opponents charging at him and local critics picking at minor flaws. But, yeah, last night goes down as a bad one for the franchise QB.

The problems, however, go above any one player.

Take your choice: Rip Jim Schwartz's defense, which gave up two TDs in the first eight plays Sunday. Or rip the offense, which fumbled twice in its first seven plays. Both are guilty.

And both suggest the real problem starts with head coach Doug Pederson. These disastrous starts to games occur on a weekly basis. They stem back to last year — really back to when offensive coordinator Frank Reich left for Indianapolis.

Pederson is at sea in trying to improve things. Opting to take the ball first Sunday night obviously did nothing to help.

And while Pederson searches for an answer to first-quarter woes, here's hoping he also relocates "Big Balls Doug," the gutsy and creative offensive mind that used to win games through sheer audacity.

Yes, the receivers have let him down, but there's no excuse for turtling into a predictable run-first, run-second, run-on-third-and-four offense, especially when you trail by double digits. Wentz threw just eight passes the entire first half.

In his postgame newser, Pederson insisted his team "had a great week of preparation" before being led to slaughter. No one believes that, of course. Early in the week, the coach fired linebacker Zach Brown. Later, there were two episodes of players anonymously sniping to the press. The culture appears cracked.

Right tackle Lane Johnson — after his worst game in years — told NBC's John Clark the team needs "a call-out session" to deal with "little stuff that slides during the week like being late to practice or late to meetings. Stuff we'll start to be held accountable for. Maybe that will creep into the game."

Maybe.

Last season, you recall, the Eagles fell to 4-6 after a 48-7 pasting in New Orleans. They rallied to finish 9-7 and even won a playoff game thanks to Cody Parkey's botched field goal in Chicago.

I'd like to think that could happen again. But when they put out a dismal effort against their biggest rival, when they look listless in preparation, disinterested during the game and, yes, even seem to surrender during a loss, what reason do fans have to believe these Eagles have another miracle left?

The Super Bowl Era appears to be over. It was nice while it lasted.
